

Tech Stations Form Joint Radio Network

The two student radio stations on the Clarkson College campus have joined to form the Intercollege Radio Network and will operate as a unit in the future.

Merged in the network are WNTC, a long-time joint venture of students of Clarkson and the State University College at Potsdam, and WCCT, formed by Clarkson students at the dormitories. The network has approximately 100 students from the two local colleges working on its staff and projects.

William S. Cleverly, a Clarkson electrical engineering junior from Whitinsville, Mass., has been elected president of the network. Gerhart Heyer, a Clarkson sophomore industrial distribution student from Summit, N. J., is station manager of WCCT, and Edward Bailey of the State University College is station manager of WNTC.

Roy W. Krause, a Clarkson electrical engineering junior from Huntington, is technical director for the network. Robert R. Stolte, a Clarkson sophomore industrial distribution student from Huntington, is secretary; and Richard K. Christian, a Clarkson junior industrial distribution student from Canton, O., is business manager.
